Sony's New Salon Style ▼

Sony has reinvented home-theater shopping. For its flagship Manhattan store, the megamarketer has opened a glamorous home-entertainment lounge designed by James Mansour (he did Henri Bendel on Fifth Avenue) that transforms TVs from commodities to couture. Relax on posh Donghia furniture, sipping cappuccino while customized entertainment centers are wheeled to you by a staff uniformed by Donna Karan. There's an adjacent audio room that will be redone seasonally; Ralph Lauren created the first. Look for other stores coast to coast in the future; 212/833-8830.
